For Immediate Release:

How Does Your Website Automate Your Real Estate Business – Or Does it?

Think for a moment about how your website automates your business. What computer actions automatically take place giving you more time to devote to your core income-producing activities? If you're like most firms, you probably have little to no automation taking place and your prospects are viewing static pages that you're spending too many hours per month keeping current and up-to-date.

If you could design the perfect website to automate your real estate business, how would it look and how would it operate? Consider, for example, the Pro Web Property Manager by Professional Web Designs. Designed to simplify property marketing on the Internet, the Pro Web Property Manger offers automation for the broker on many levels. It automatically: showcases your properties on a Google Map, scales and grows with your business (including offices and agents), features random properties as well as your latest news and press releases on your agency's home page, produces an agent listing report, sends auto-reply emails to prospective customers when they inquire on a given property -- and more!

For the many real estate firms who choose to automate their business with the Pro Web Property Manager, they are quickly rising above their competition, while offering a better customer experience with the latest web 2.0 technology. To inquire about a hands-on, full-access demo of the Pro Web Property Manager, contact Professional Web Designs at 941-922-3003 or visit www.prowebdesigns.us. We can be your technology partner both before and after the successful launch of your new site.
